Outstanding College Athlete ...

In 1937, Jack Caswell enrolled at Northwestern University in Boston. There he was a stand-out athlete. "With his great speed, he is the best climax runner on the Northeastern squad, is in excellent pass receiver, and blocks and tackles with fellows better physically equipped. Caswell is one of the few bright spots in a rather drab Northeastern football setting, this fall." source - November 17, 1939 Utica NY Daily Press 1939 - 4802.pdf fultonhistory.com

Ithaca Shows Northeastern How It's Done

During World War II, Jack served with the Marines. Later, He was employed with the General Circuits Co., Syracuse as a salesman. He subsequently joined the Remington Arms where his artistic skills were used as an engraver for 17 years. He retired in 1982 from the Remington Arms Company.

Walter Bala, a Remington Arms Custom Shop engraver and checkerer said this about Jack Caswell in an interview with the Remington Society of America.

"Jack Caswell also engraved guns. He was an excellent engraver. When I went over to the checkering, we just could not keep up with the engraving. They hired Jack as he had worked as an engraver at Remington for a couple of years. He went to a salesman's job, then they called him back to engrave."

"Jack didn't need to be taught, he knew how to do it. They worked over there and I was doing most of the checkering. Jack did the complete job from start to finish. He did gold work, too. I'm not sure how he signed his work JC or C."

Jack Caswell died on May 31, 1990 and is buried, next to his wife Camilla, in Armory Hill Cemetery. Jack married Camilla Jarvis on June 1, 1968, in Amsterdam.
